1) Battle prep: 5 rds

Fig 12, prone unsupported, deliberate, 5 rounds in 1 minute.

2) Blitzkrieg – details of 5 shooters: 10 rds

Fig 12 standing unsupported snap, 5 exposures at ranges 90-80-70-60-50. Start rifle loaded with bolt closed on empty chamber at 100 m. On command/whistle shooters have 15 seconds to move up 10 m and fire 2 shots into the Fig 12 to their front. Rifles reset to empty chamber between each exposure.

3) Stalingrad – der Kessel (the Cauldron), close quarter battle at it's worst: 10 rds

Fig 12 snap, 5 x 4 second exposures from the standing unsupported at 50 m, 2 rds per exposure. Start rifles at low port (in shoulder, muzzle down at ~30°) loaded and actioned.

4) Stalingrad – Sniper's kingdom: 5 rds

Fig 14 snap from the prone supported position (field rests allowed) at 100 m, 5 x 2 second exposures over the course of 2 minutes as directed by the RCO. Double scoring on each hit.

5) Kursk – The greatest tank battle: 10 rds

Steel plate and Tank target printed on A4 paper, deliberate from prone unsupported position at 100 m over 2 minutes. Steel plate to be knocked down first before Tank target can be engaged.

6) Berlin – storm the Reichstag: 10 rds

Fig 14 snap from the standing/kneeling unsupported positions, 5 x exposures of 20 sec at 100-80-60-40-20 m ranges, 2 rds per exposure. Each exposure starts on RCO's command and firers have 15 sec to move to the next firing point and engage targets with 1 rd standing and 1 rd kneeling. Firers start in the loaded and actioned state at 100 m.

Any rifle may be used but only German or Russian WWII calibre rifles are eligible for trophies on the day, because, let's face it, both Germans and Russians used each-other's captured weapons in addition to their own. Read into that any 30 cal Mauser (Spanish, Portugese, Turkish etc) or Nagant is ok.
